

ABSTRACT

A fuel cell includes a body, and a valve for releasing dispensable fluid from the body. The valve includes an elongated stem. A unitary member is secured to the body by its first end being secured to the stem. The unitary member includes a connector formed at a second end and a fluid conduit extending between the first and second ends. The connector is adapted for sealingly engaging a dispensable fluid inlet.